Dear Marty,

As you know, we have had our electrical distribution system tested many times in the past through an Infrared Thermal Imaging service. However, now that your TEGG certified electricians have finished testing the electrical equipment within our bottling plant, I must say... I am extremely impressed!

Your unique three-step testing process was extremely thorough. Your TEGG trained electricians were very professional and knowledgeable throughout the entire process. We are now truly confident that your extensive method of testing will ensure the safety of our employees against electrical fires and prevent accidental shut-downs due to potential component failure.

For the reasons stated above, I highly recommend your comprehensive electrical component testing service to anyone who takes pride in making sure their facility never experiences an unplanned electrical power outage and does everything possible to ensure the safety of their employees.

Many thanks,

John Fortini
Plant Director
